Women in the Workplace

COVID has forever changed workplace. Earlier this year, Kimberly Kane, CEO of Kane Communications Group headquartered out of Milwaukee, released a new study which showed half of the working women in Wisconsin are considering quitting their jobs. That is 25 percent higher than the national average. Industries that saw the highest impact for were retail, food service and hospitality. Women are thinking about leaving because they feel undervalued in their current role. This is problematic since Kane's study sites "women workers are vital to a healthy economy."

So how can employers change the minds of these working women? Check out the full article to find out, <https://www.kanecommgroup.com>.

Common challenges facing women in the modern workforce include:

- Stress and Mental Health
- Working Mothers
- Diversity Issues
- Generational Gaps
- Connecting to Purpose
- Types of Wisconsin Industries

Struggles for Parents with Child Care Shortage

"Whether it's through federal legislation, changes to state subsidy programs or employers taking matters into their own hands, they say fixing child care is key to strengthening Wisconsin's economy." A recent article from The Cap Times shared insight on current struggles in the child care system for both parents and child care providers. Will the current workforce see relief?
